DALLAS, Nov. 5, 2010 /PRNewswire via COMTEX/ --

To honor its more than 750 Employees who currently serve in the National Guard and Reserves, along with thousands of Customers who served or are serving in the armed forces, Southwest Airlines is proud to call November its "Military Heroes Month." The airline is working with select nonprofit organizations across the country throughout November to thank and give back to the military service members and their families.

"Southwest was founded on the value of Freedom, and we couldn't think of a better way to say 'thank you' to those who have preserved the freedoms of our country, than by giving back all month long," said Linda Rutherford, Southwest's Vice President of Communication and Strategic Outreach. "Supporting the military and military families is extremely important to us, and this month of activity reflects our dedication to these heroes."
